

FROSH WEEK SHENANIGANS

By: O-Town & Rye-Bread

FROSH WEEK!!

As always, frosh week proved to be a memorable time for all involved. With a staggering 160 person increase in this year's frosh group, we were even more rambunctious, loud, and full of enthusiasm than in previous years.

SURVIVAL GUIDE TO ENGINEERING

In fine frosh week from, this OSNAP is dedicated to the first years in engineering. So on behalf of all engineers at the University of Guelph: Welcome!

By now you have surely gotten over your drinking binges and settled down into your new school for your first semester. Assignments are beginning to be doled out, and it may seem a little overwhelming. No Worries! Just remember that all of the upper years have gotten through this, and at least one of them is bound to be dumber than you are. Cause trust me, there are some dumb ones (Owen Miles).

While trucking through your first year courses, you may have noticed that working in groups makes things a lot easier. You'll probably find throughout your tenure here that this case holds true; whenever you run into a problem in an assignment or a lab, you can be sure to find someone willing to help you out. So the lesson to be learned here is that you should be nice (no matter how fake it makes you) to everyone (no matter how much his/her laugh makes you want to send your head through a sheet of drywall) because one day they may be the one between you and passing Diffies.

Which brings me to my next point. Party hard. There's never going to be a semester in your undergrad so devoid of work, stress, and sleepless nights. Enjoy your first year with all your might, because one great night of 'socializing' is worth more than an extra 10% in an exam (unless that extra 10% means you pass the course, of course).

Despite any convictions you may have about the connotations of the term 'getting involved' (I thought that ENGSOC was full of pimple faced losers in my first years), getting your say in the happenings of the program is a pretty awesome thing. I totally recommend getting involved, because you can do some pretty fun stuff with some pretty fun people, like writing this engineering publication for example.

She Thinks Our Tractor is Sexy

This happened a few nights ago, and rumours have been spreading like wildfire... Apparently two girls went to first base (maybe more) on our tractor! thats right, they just dropped the gloves right there and started making out. I guess the tractor has been hot lately with all those sexy Enviro's doing the tractor lab (and disrupting everyone else) but this is shocking news. Unfortunately only four water students were present during the offence and were unable to document the encounter...is it a figment of late night lab syndrome? A hallucination? A dream? A clever prank? Or a vision of things to come? Or maybe two chicks just ACTUALLY felt like getting hot and heavy on our tractor...possibly to taunt the over worked water guys, maybe as some sort of evil thrill of knowing that yes we go to a school with a lot of girls, but goddamn it we dont have the social skills to get them or the time to talk to them. Either way I expect the computer lab downstairs to be a little more packed on those late lonely Tuesday nights...

OCTOBER 2009

Sun	Mon	Tues	Wed	Thurs	Fri	Sat
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7 Pizza Day	8	9	10
11	12	13	14 Pizza Day	15	16	17 OktoberFest (We think)
18	19	20	21 SUB Day (Just kidding its Pizza Day)	22	23	24
25	26	27	28 Pizza Day	29	30	31 Trick or Eat

Upcoming Events

OktoberFest - An epic event with drunkenness.

Trick or Eat - Get dressed up, and trick or treat for a good cause, asking for non-perishable food items.

Also, look keep your ear to the ground for the word on the street on any kegger activity in the last week, especially right on Halloween.

Corn Roast Caprion by Chris "Rising Sun" Onishi

Rain Roast, A Good Time By All By: Unknown Author

Well Ryan and Owen were far, far too drunk to even recall a story to put here, so this article rests in an unknown author:

What will be referred to in infamy for years to come as Rain Roast was a 'storming success.' Thanks to the tireless efforts of local hearthrob beard-growing Nick Swerdlyk and not-to-be-outdone energy girl Lindsay Mooradian.

Through what seemed to be a constant screen of torrential rain, one could see the endless plethora of inebriated engineering students consuming hamburgers, corn, and most notably Sleeman Beer.

The night, as per usual, was capped off by the boat race competition, where two ties in the final round declared two winning teams this year, which was ok by Jordan Stewart.

"I didn't even care. If I chugged another beer, I would have probably died right there." Jordan said while recalling the night.

COMIC BY CODY:

HOW CREDIBLE IS THAT CARBON?

Did you know that carbon credits are not all the same? Depending on which company they are purchased from, the steps that company takes to help the environment may vary. Although buying credits is better than doing nothing, isn't it better to reduce in the first place?

What is Osnap?

Osnap is your semi-unofficial, offensive, laid back, and poorly written/edited student publication. One of the main purposes of osnap is to shamelessly promote engineering society events in an attempt to create a sense of community here in Thornborough. Secondly our goal is to provide an engineering perspective to the goings on around campus. Finally our goal is to provide you with the opportunity to write for us and have your comments or thoughts published around the building.

Your engineering society is there to serve your engineering community. the society is there to organize events, maintain our credibility among other schools and professional organizations, and provide you with delicious snacks really cheap from the office (dont tell hospitality). The engineering society is an open doors policy organization that encourages enthusiasm and heavy drinking among the school of engineering.

We may comment improperly on subjects that you may hear of on campus or as we refer to it 'campus drama'. Also we may be snide and rude but we are also cowards who fear the administrations wrath, therefore this publication is only distributed around the engineering building, thereby truly being YOUR paper.

One of the ways we like to make this actually your paper is by publishing your articles, thoughts, complaints, and even personal threats. osnap is a publication completely open to you for input or submission. submissions could be a response or argument to something we published recently, or a funny news story you heard about online that you want to share with others. send everything you think of to the publications email, and we will judge it to be up to our (sub) standards and publish it (god knows, we are too busy to be writing ourselves). Don't worry about length, a sentence or two is fine and much appreciated.

Our goal is to give you a chance on the soap-box, a chance in front of the crowd, a chance with the microphone to pour your heart onto paper to be judged by your friends and colleagues.

And Remember That We Want Your meaty, tasty, nasty, large, articles (in our mouth). Including questions for our new advice column. Just write whatever you want, and drop it off at the EngSoc Office.
